About the workshop: Science communication plays an integral role in one's scientific career. Being able to effectively disseminate research findings within the community and to consider collective opinions in prioritizing research needs is an important attribute of scientific maturity. We invite you to this workshop which is aimed at equipping participants with the essential know-how of research and communication ethics, writing grants, writing as well as speaking about science to a non-specialist audience, building the foundation for a career in research and funding opportunities at India Alliance.

Objectives:

- To provide training in written and oral communication skills
- To provide an opportunity to young researchers to discuss various issues pertaining to their research career including mentorship, career planning, and ethical aspects of scientific and medical research
- To propagate skills as well as perspective building for the most aspiring young researchers by bringing young scientists and senior mentors

Registration Details

To keep the modules interactive, focused, and productive, the number of students trained at each workshop is limited to 60 participants comprising of Junior Scientists, Researchers, Assistant & Associate Professors, Research Scholars of Life Sciences and Health Sciences.
